SUPERVISORS PROCEED WITH DESIGN DEVELOPMENT FOR THE NEW HERSHEY COMMUNITY CENTER WITH CAREFUL CONSIDERATION OF FINANCES

The schematic design for the new community center was presented and approved at the May 8, 2018 Board of Supervisors meeting, allowing the Township to move forward with the design development phase of the project.

Former Hershey resident Jim Bogrette from Kimmel Bogrette Architecture + Site presented the design for the new center which will include a full-size basketball gymnasium, senior center, fitness center, indoor track, a zero-entry indoor and outdoor leisure pool with active play components, a 50-meter competitive swimming pool, a large multi-purpose room, child care area, meeting rooms, a commercial kitchen, and refreshment area.

A line of credit was secured last year in preparation for the schematic and design development phases. Funding not to exceed $720,000 will be drawn down for the next phase. The design development phase will finalize the design concept in terms of architectural, electrical, mechanical, and structural systems, for a buildable design.

For more than half a century, the Cocoa Avenue recreation center has provided programs, lessons and aquatic activities. But the aging facility is challenging and expensive to maintain and does not provide the space and water time to meet the needs of the community.

Derry Township is committed to continuing the recreational services that have been offered to the residents for more than 55 years. The new Hershey Community Center will expand the programming to meet the community's growing and diverse needs. The new center will provide a safe environment for our youth to enjoy activities, for our seniors to gather and stay active, and for all residents to engage in programs and activities to remain mentally and physically fit.

Over the last several years, The Township, with the assistance of consultants and a large community stakeholders committee, performed a market analysis, solicited input from members of the community, conducted an operations analysis, and created a program based on the research.

Matthew Mandia, director of the department of parks and recreation for 24 years, described the department's vision for the center. "We are creating a culture of community that will reside within the walls of the new center. We will work with the school district in consistency with their Cocoa Principles, establishing a welcoming, respectful, and positive place for our community's youth. Working with the seniors to provide expanded opportunities for socialization, multi-generational programming and alternative health and wellness opportunities. Working with the aquatics community not merely on competitive swimming, but to expose and make available all of the benefits that water provides to the body and its overall well-being. Working with the library, a campus neighbor and fellow department, expanding cooperative programming. And, participating with the Medical Center to create a deliberate campaign to foster overall health through nutrition, exercise, mental and physical well-being and provide warm water for post rehabilitation exercise, all aimed to improve the quality of life in our community."

A 50-meter pool will make the center a premier facility for competitive swimming in the area, and will also provide additional much-needed water for recreational swimmers. Local, state, and regional aquatic meets will increase the revenue to be generated by the center and will bolster the local economy in tourism and hospitality services needed by the swimmers and their families.

Since the competitive swimming component of the new center will positively affect the economic environment of Hershey and the surrounding region, the project will be eligible for grant funding geared to stimulate the economy. In addition, the cost to operate a 50-meter pool compared to a 25-yard pool is offset because the revenue that can be produced is higher with a competitive size pool.

The cost of the new community center is estimated at $32 million. This summer the Township will embark upon a $5 million capital campaign in support of the center.

In March 2018, the Board of Supervisors approved a hedge contract to lock in the current interest rates for future borrowing. The incremental debt service to the Township to finance $27 million will be approximately $1,100,000 a year for 20 years.

The Township continues to explore funding opportunities from multiple sources to find the best possible solutions to pay for the Community Center with the least impact on the taxpayer.

In addition, the Board of Supervisors has undertaken an overall analysis of the Township's finances. In 2017, Public Financial Management (PFM) was contracted to create a tool that enables the Township to perform budgetary modeling, to look at scenarios and enter expenditures that are being considered and observe the overall effect on the budget. PFM will make a public presentation on the fiscal condition of the Township and the forecasted ability to fund the Community Center at the Board of Supervisors meeting on June 12.

The project is scheduled to be bid in the first quarter of 2019 with construction to commence in spring 2019. The new facility will open in May 2020.

Please visit the Township's website for audio and video recordings of the May 8 meeting, to see the planning timeline, the project schedule, and funding considerations. The site is updated regularly as the project proceeds.

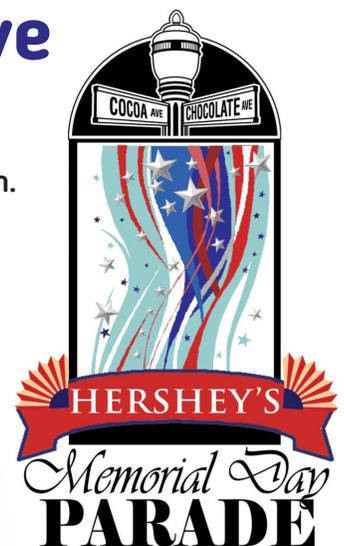

The public is encouraged to call or email questions to fully understand the project, its financing, and the overall benefit to our community.

OFFICER MARYGRACE KEPPLE NAMED OFFICER OF THE YEAR

Officer Marygrace Kepple was selected by her peers to receive the 2018 Hershey Lions Club Officer of the Year award. Officer Kepple began her career with Derry Township 25 years ago in April 1993 as a patrol officer. She became the School Resource Officer for Derry Township School District in 2001, a position she still holds today.

The School Resource Officer, by definition, is a career law enforcement officer with sworn authority, who is deployed by a police department or agency in a community-oriented policing assignment, to work in collaboration with one or more schools.

“Mary has made this collaboration between the Derry Township Police Department and Derry Township School District a seamless working relationship that involves not only these two agencies, but also the students, parents, and the community. She is a police officer who enforces laws within her responsibilities at the school, but more importantly, she is the representative and face of the police department, someone for the students to look to, and someone for them to be able to identify with the police,” said Chief Warner.

“She is able to connect with students and develop a rapport with them. She also acts as an impromptu counselor, listening and encouraging the best from the students she interacts with on a daily basis,” he added.

Officer Kepple provides information and instruction on a variety of topics such as bullying, sexting, drinking, drugs, theft, truancy, and school safety. Most often, just walking the halls, having positive interactions with the students, and giving a visual presence in the schools, makes an impact on those around her.

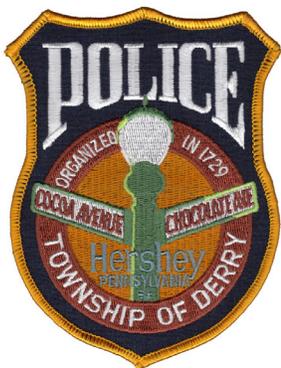

Officer Kepple has made this long-standing commitment to the department without hesitation. She is recognized for her dedication and excellent service to the community.

Please Remember Proper Pet Etiquette

Explains How to Dispose of Charcoal Ashes

Charcoal ashes should only be handled after they are completely cooled. Once cooled, they can be collected in a non-combustible container such as an old coffee can or an empty, dry paint can. Or you can wrap the ashes in aluminum foil - a perfect reuse for food-contaminated foil, which cannot be recycled. The contained ashes should then be placed in the trash for pickup. If you were thinking about spreading the ashes outside, first consider where those ashes came from.

Ash can make excellent fertilizer when alkaline soil is needed, but most charcoal ash should not be spread in your garden or compost. Popular brands of charcoal briquettes, which represent 93 percent of all charcoal shipped, contain additives that can affect the ash's value as fertilizer and may pose a human health risk. Briquettes begin with scrap wood, but coal, borax, lighter fluid, and fillers may be added before the whole thing is pressed into a pillow shape. The shape and additives ensure an effective, consistent product.

Lump charcoal, the alternative to briquettes, also begins with scrap wood, but chemicals aren't added during the manufacturing process. It is essentially burned wood and is therefore safe to add to your compost. Lump charcoal represents just seven percent of charcoal shipped, but its use has steadily increased for at least a decade. Consider choosing it next time you grill; afterward, you can dispose of the ashes and your garden or compost pile. Or, skip charcoal entirely and go with the greener grilling option; a gas grill.

A graphic for Recyclebank's rewards program. It features a background image of a residential street with houses and trees. Overlaid on the image is the text "EARN HUNDREDS OF DOLLARS IN REWARDS VALUE*" in large, bold, white letters. Below this, in smaller white text, it says "Sign up and start getting rewarded for recycling and learning online." At the bottom, there are three icons: a recycling symbol, a star, and a dollar sign. Under each icon is the text "RECYCLE", "EARN POINTS", and "GET REWARDS" respectively. At the very bottom, it says "Sign up today at Recyclebank.com".

Speed Trailers to Warn Motorists

Now that warmer weather is finally upon us, the Police Department will be deploying the speed trailer and speed sign at various locations throughout the Township to advise motorists of their travel speeds compared to the posted speed limit.

Speeding and/or driving at an unsafe speed in wet roadway conditions is the number one cause of motor vehicle crashes in Pennsylvania. The department is committed to enforcing speed limits and advising motorists when they are driving above the posted limits to reduce the number of crashes in Derry Township.

The department wants everyone who travels in Derry Township to do so in a safe manner. Requests for the speed trailer or speed sign to be placed on a particular street can be made to the Operations Division by calling Lt. Terry Ferree at 717-524-2202, or through www.derrypd.com in the 'Contact Us' submission portal.

Retiring Old Glory

If your American flag is no longer a fitting emblem for display, please bring it to the Recycling Center, 650 Clearwater Road, to be properly disposed of.

How to Make a Stormwater-Friendly Property

Properties come in all shapes and sizes, but when it comes to stormwater the common link between all properties is the amount of impervious area present. Impervious area is any surface which inhibits infiltration of rainfall into the soil. This includes pavement (asphalt, concrete, etc.), rooftops, patios, sidewalks, and compacted gravelled surfaces such as parking areas and driveways. Numerous studies have shown that impervious area is a strong indicator of both the quantity and quality of stormwater. Therefore, to make a property more stormwater friendly, one would want to find ways to reduce the volume of stormwater that leaves the property as well as reduce the amount of pollutants that leave with that stormwater. To accomplish these goals, it's wise to first determine the current condition of your property.

A good first place to start is to obtain an aerial photo of your property. This can be done with free online programs like Google Maps or the Dauphin County Parcel Viewer online interactive map. With the aerial photograph in hand, you can start identifying the impervious area on your property and get a visual on how close the impervious areas are to things like the street, stormwater inlets, or other means of stormwater conveyance. If you can't find an aerial photo, you can just sketch out your property on a piece of paper. You won't be graded on artistic ability, so don't let that hold you back.

Next, you'll want to determine the pathways water is flowing off your impervious surfaces. Roofs usually have gutters and downspouts, so that's a good place to start. Look where the downspout discharges and see where the water will flow from there. Pay particular attention to whether the water is flowing across your lawn or other landscaping, or if it's flowing onto your driveway or other impermeable surfaces. A downspout discharging directly or close to an impervious surface that could direct the water off your property could be a good candidate for something like a rain barrel or a downspout extender that directs the water onto the lawn or landscaping instead of the street, giving it time to infiltrate into the soil. If downspouts are already discharging into your lawn or landscaping and have a nice buffer to conveyance features, then you don't want to spend time and money fixing what isn't broken.

Once you've identified some areas on your property that could be potential candidates for stormwater improvements, you'll need to determine what types of improvements might be appropriate. To get your mind thinking, items like rain barrels or cisterns, conservation landscaping, tree planting, rain gardens, permeable hardscapes, and dry wells might be potential options. You could also look at some practices that reduce what's already there, such as removing unwanted impervious areas (such as an underused patio) or limiting the amount of fertilizer you apply to your lawn.

Speaking of fertilizing, do not apply fertilizers before spring green up or after the grass becomes dormant. Researchers have concluded that the highest fertilizer loss occurs when the grass is dormant. Depending on climate conditions, the dormancy period usually begins between Halloween and Thanksgiving. Despite popular belief your lawn will green up on its own in the spring, you don't need to fertilize to make it happen. If you plan to fertilize in the spring, do so after the grass greens, which means it's no longer dormant. If you do apply fertilizer, maximize the use of slow release nitrogen fertilizers. Check the bag label to see how much water insoluble nitrogen or WIN it contains. Generally, 20 to 50% of WIN is desirable. In general, you often need a lot less fertilizer than you think, and in many cases if you are mulching your clippings and have a mature lawn you might not even need to fertilize, or only fertilize once a year. Remember, if you aren't seeing the results you want, you can always add additional fertilizer later. Chances are, you can do with a lot less, and that will save you time and money.

There are many things that can be done, and it will depend on your site-specific conditions and budget. A great place to start is by reading the Homeowner Guide For a More Bay-Friendly Property at <http://chesapeakestormwater.net/be-bay-friendly/assessing-your-property/>, provided by the Chesapeake Stormwater Network. The Chesapeake Stormwater Network has many resources on their website that can help you achieve a Stormwater-Friendly Property!

A. D. LOPEZ PRESS - HERSHEY, CUBA

Brochures promoted traveling to Hershey, Cuba on the Hershey Cuban railroad, staying at the town's hotel, and playing a round on the local golf course, circa 1925–1935.

Milton Hershey first visited Cuba in January 1916. It is said that he fell in love with the country at first sight. Hershey was excited by Cuba's immense sugar plantations. In 1916, Europe was in the midst of World War I, and sugar, essential to milk chocolate production, was in short supply. During his first visit, Milton Hershey decided to purchase sugar plantations and mills so that he could mill and refine his own sugar for use in his Hershey chocolate factory.

True to style, once he had made the decision, Milton Hershey moved rapidly. A few weeks after his arrival, he had explored the country for sixty miles east of Havana, bought a small sugar mill, Central San Juan Bautista, (central=Cuban word meaning sugar mill with its surrounding town) and selected the site for a new sugar mill, and started to build a railroad to service it. When he returned home to Hershey, Pennsylvania in early April, the Cuban enterprise was already well under way.

The flagship of Hershey's Cuban holdings was a new mill and town, Central Hershey, located near Santa Cruz del Norte. Local Cuban businessmen cautioned Milton Hershey against his plans. The chosen site was not close to transportation or in ready supply of workers. However, Milton Hershey constructed an electric railroad to connect his new sugar mill with Matanzas and Havana, the two major shipping ports on Cuba's north shore. The railroad also extended into the countryside linking the new sugar mill with many of the surrounding sugar plantations. Like Hershey, Pennsylvania, the new railroad made it easy to travel to Hershey and to ship milled sugar to the Cuban ports. Completed in October 1922, the railroad not only aided Milton Hershey's Cuban business, but also improved access to Cuba's north-east coast, opening that region to future development.

The sugar mill was completed in 1918. Along with the mill, Mr. Hershey constructed a model town or "batey." In many ways, Central Hershey, though a much smaller community, offered the same amenities and services found in its big sister, Hershey, Pennsylvania. In addition to comfortable homes for rent, there was good health care, public education, parks, recreational facilities including a movie theater, a baseball diamond, golf course and sport club, and a general store.

To manage his Cuban properties, Mr. Hershey selected Percy Alexander [P.A.] Staples. First hired in 1920 to straighten out the new business's finances, Staples quickly impressed his boss and in 1921 became the financial manager of Hershey's Cuban railroad and sugar companies. He was soon promoted to General Manager and Director of Hershey's Cuban interests from 1921-1947. As general manager, he rebuilt and reorganized Hershey's Cuban businesses to a point where they produced more than three times Hershey Chocolate's vast requirements for sugar. To extend the sugar employment season, Hershey built a sugar refinery to produce white table sugar, the first refinery on the island.

By 1930, some 60,000 acres of land, five times as much as the Pennsylvania holdings, had been acquired in Cuba. Milton Hershey sought to diversify the town's economy and introduced a henequen processing factory for producing sisal and a peanut oil plant to keep Hershey workers employed the year round.

After launching Central Hershey, Hershey purchased other properties, some for their mills and others for the sugar plantations attached to them. In 1920, he bought Central Rosario. In 1925, he bought Central Carmen and Central San Antonio and in 1927 Central Jesus Maria. Most of the mills were dismantled, except for those at San Antonio and Rosario.

At Rosario, Milton Hershey also founded an orphan school, the Hershey Agricultural School. He ran it for 10 years before transferring its operation to a local orphanage. The first students were boys whose parents had been killed in a 1923 train accident on the Hershey Cuban Railroad. The primary object of this school was to train boys for jobs on the farm or in industry. Milton Hershey had great plans for it, including building a model sugar mill and teaching modern agricultural methods to prepare the boys for careers in Cuba's principal industries.

Hershey's manner of doing business in Cuba contrasted sharply with most foreign businessmen who exploited the country and took their profits home. Cuba praised and honored Milton Hershey with many awards including the highest honor that the country could bestow: The Grand Cross of the National Order of the Carlos Manuel de Cespedes. In presenting it to Milton Hershey, Cuban President Machado [President 1925-1933] spoke these words:

“You have presented to the world a truly admirable organization on Cuban soil... The order of Carlos Manuel de Cespedes has not been lavished. We concede it only when a bit of our soul and all of our admiration goes with it.”

In 1944, P.A. Staples urged Milton Hershey to sell his Cuban properties. Staples, who had recently been tapped to be Milton Hershey's successor in Hershey, PA, was concerned about Cuba's political unrest and its future. The sale to the Cuban Atlantic Sugar Company was completed in April 1946. At the time of the sale the Cuban operations included 60,000 acres of land, five raw sugar mills, a peanut oil plant, a henequen plant, four electric plants, and 251 miles of railroad track with sufficient locomotives and cars. The sale's approximately $20 million profit was added to the Milton Hershey School Trust fund.

Staples' fears about Cuba's future were well-founded. In 1959, Fidel Castro led a successful revolution and once in power, nationalized all of Cuba's private industries and businesses.

This spring, The Hershey Story Museum opened a new exhibit: “Mr. Hershey's Cuba, A Sweet Venture in Sugar, 1916-1946.” The exhibit explores Milton Hershey's second model town, Hershey, Cuba, and his work to build a sugar industry. Visit <https://hersheystory.org/current-special-exhibit/>.
