STOP THIS INVADER! SPOTTED LANTERNFLY . . .

WHAT IS IT? The spotted lanternfly is an invasive insect from Asia currently found in southeastern Pennsylvania, and sightings have been reported in some neighboring states.

The pest threatens important agricultural commodities, including the grape, hardwood, tree fruit, landscape, and nursery industries – sectors that contribute nearly $18 billion annually to Pennsylvania's economy.

This planthopper weakens plants by feeding on sap. It excretes a sugary substance called honeydew, which attracts stinging insects, promotes the growth of sooty mold, and causes a messy nuisance for residents.

To help stop the spread of spotted lanternfly, the state has issued a quarantine order requiring the inspection of all items moving within or out of the area to prevent the transport of any living life stage of the pest.

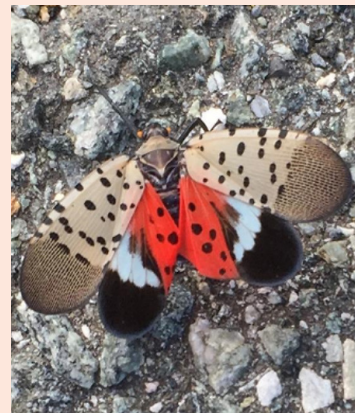

KNOW WHAT TO LOOK FOR

Spotted lanternfly adults are about 1 inch long and half inch wide with wings folded. Nymphs are 1/8 to 1/2 inch long and develop through four stages, all of which are wingless.

Egg masses are gray, mud-like covering, which can become dry and cracked over time. Older egg masses may lose their covering and appear as columns of 30-50 seed-like eggs. Egg masses can be found on trees, rocks, and other surfaces.

2020 LEAF COLLECTION

As summer draws to an end, the Public Works Department prepares for the advent of our annual leaf collection. Leaf collection is scheduled to begin on Monday, October 5, 2020 and end on Friday December 4, 2020.

We ask that residents observe the following guidelines when placing leaves at the curb

THE HERSHEY'S HIGH POINT MANSION

WHEN MILTON HERSHEY DECIDED TO MOVE HIS CHOCOLATE BUSINESS TO DERRY CHURCH, PA AND BUILD A TOWN THAT WOULD SUPPORT HIS WORKERS, HE AND CATHERINE (OR KITTY AS SHE WAS AFFECTIONATELY KNOWN), MADE PLANS TO BUILD A HOME.

The land for their new home was surveyed in 1903, shortly after ground was broken for the new factory. Mr. Hershey hired C. Emlen Urban, a noted Lancaster architect, to design their new home. Urban was also the architect for the new chocolate factory and most of the other major buildings constructed during the early years of the community (visit <https://hersheyarchives.org/> to learn more about Mr. Urban). A contract for the Hershey's mansion was signed in 1905 but construction was delayed until early 1906. The mansion was completed in 1908 and Milton and Catherine Hershey soon took up residence.

LancasterHistory.org.)*

High Point grounds were open to visitors as a public garden, ca. 1911–1918.

Their new home was named High Point, reflecting its location on a rise above the chocolate factory. High Point, while a gracious and comfortable home, was a relatively modest dwelling. The construction, furnishings, and landscaping of the Mansion cost about $100,000. Total cost of the house itself, recorded in architect C. Emlen Urban's invoice, was $53,433. Compared with the homes of other wealthy industrialists, the Mansion was modest both in size and appointments. It had few rooms (22), no bar, and no swimming pool. In comparison, George Vanderbilt spent an estimated $10 million for his 250-room mansion, Biltmore, situated on 125,000 acres in Asheville, North Carolina.

In designing High Point, Urban created an open design for the first floor, which was quite unique for the time period, but also maintained the traditional 2.5 story American Foursquare layout (four rooms on the first floor, and four on the second, along with a half-story third floor). The open concept removed any walls and doors between the living room, dining room, library and the entry hall. The entry hall was specially designed to showcase a cut glass torchiere which Mr. Hershey had first seen at the 1893 Columbian Exposition (the torchiere is currently on exhibit at The Hershey Story). Some of the furniture and much of the china had been bought by the Hershey's on their travels abroad or on shopping excursions to Philadelphia and New York. To decorate the Mansion, they were assisted by the Chapman Decorative Company of Philadelphia. While the Hershey's did hire professional decorators, they also enjoyed following their own tastes. Kitty saw to it that the rooms had plenty of color. The Blue Room and the Green Room were the upstairs guest rooms. Mr. Hershey's bedroom was the Gold Room. In Mrs. Hershey's room, both walls and carpet were rose pink. The living room had several glassed-in bookcases furnished with sets of standard authors. On winter evenings Milton Hershey used to sit there, looking into the fireplace, which was furnished with gas logs (a relatively new invention).

The staff at High Point was small: a housekeeper, a houseman, and a housemaid. The housekeeper was Mrs. Bertha Candoni, who began working for the Hershey's in Europe as a traveling companion and interpreter; she spoke seven languages. The houseman, Clayton Lehman, had been a gardener at the Homestead and became the majordomo at the Mansion. He looked after the lights, sent for the carpenter and plumber when they were needed, cleaned the chandelier, walked the dog, and kept peace when possible between Mrs. Candoni and the housemaid (who changed twenty-two times in eleven years.)

The gardens were originally laid out by noted Philadelphia landscape architect, Olgesby Paul. Those plans were implemented and expanded by Harry Haverstick, head of the Hershey Nursery and Greenhouses. Kitty Hershey's greatest pleasure was in the garden. Behind the house was a small arbor by a flower-bordered pool into which a fountain tossed a jet of water. She used to sit there for hours, moving only when a gust of wind blew the spray over her. She tried to protect herself from this annoyance by moving the fountain. Jake Hummel moved it for her repeatedly, but nothing would do until the spray fountain was removed altogether and the Boy with the Leaking Boot (now at Hershey Gardens) replaced it.

The rose garden transplanted from High Point to its new location at Hershey Gardens, ca. 1954.

It was in the gardens and the landscaping that Kitty Hershey made her greatest contribution to the town. Haverstick thought highly of Kitty Hershey's taste. "She was interested in the planting of trees and everything that made the properties look nice" recalled one of the gardeners.

Catherine Hershey died March 23, 1915 after a long illness. In about 1918 a memorial rose garden was planted at High Point. The rose garden was planted near the Country Club's future swimming pool. When the pool was constructed in 1954, the memorial rose garden was transplanted to Hershey Gardens.

During the years following her death, Milton Hershey spent long periods traveling. In 1930 he turned High Point over to the newly formed Hershey Country Club, retaining the second-floor rooms as his apartment. The first-floor rooms were converted to meet the needs of the Country Club. In 1939 the Country Club added a one story, free standing addition to serve as the men's locker room.

The living room at High Point was converted into a board room when Hershey Foods Corporation restored and repurposed the mansion into their corporate headquarters, ca. 1980.

One of the locker rooms at High Point when the mansion was used as the Hershey Country Club clubhouse, ca. 1939.

Milton Hershey died on October 13, 1945, just one month after his 88th birthday. High Point continued to serve as the Country Club Clubhouse until 1970 when the Club moved to a new facility on Derry Road. High Point sat vacant until 1977 when it was acquired by Hershey Foods Corporation to serve as a corporate headquarters. Hershey Foods Corporation made extensive renovations to the building to make it functional as an office building, while also placing it on the National Register of Historic Places. The Company used High Point for their executive offices until 1991 when they relocated to a new corporate headquarters located just north of Hershey. Hershey Trust Company has occupied the building since December 1991.

Starting in late October, The Hershey Story Museum is proud to host in-person tours at High Point Mansion several times a week through December. Groups will be limited to ten guests. Face coverings are required. Tickets must be purchased in advance at www.HersheyStory.org or at The Hershey Story Museum.

Hershey Volunteer Fire Company Activity Report

Provided by David Sassaman, HVFC Public Information Officer

Fire Safety

Safety Note

Fall also produces leaves, lots of leaves and with that comes an increased risk of fire from the hot exhausts of cars. Be aware of where you park. Don't park over leaf piles or places your collected leaves near an open ignition source.

This is also a great time to prepare for the colder months that are just around the corner. Make an appointment to have your fireplace and chimney serviced so when winter comes a knocking, you'll be all ready to safely enjoy the warmth and comfort of your fireplace.

I would also like to stress the importance of proper disposal of hot coals or fireplace ash. Leftover ash can remain hot for hours and even days after discarded. Please remember when you are emptying your fireplace firebox or your outside fire ring all remaining ash needs to be soaked with water and placed in a covered metal container away from your house, garage or any combustible material such as yard waste. DO NOT PLACE ASH IN A PLASTIC WASTER CONTAINER. Following these guidelines will help reduce any chance of a fire and loss of life or property.

BOB NAEYE: FINDING LIFE IN OTHER WORLDS

October 18, 2020 • 2:00 p.m. • ZOOM

Are we alone or do we share our solar system and galaxy with other forms of life? And how widespread are advanced civilizations with whom we could communicate?

Right now, we don't have answers to these profound questions. But scientists are in hot pursuit. The technology of searching for life on other worlds has reached a level of maturity where the first definitive evidence of extraterrestrial life could come to the very near future.

Join us on Zoom with Hershey-based science journalist Robert Naeye will explore three different roads for detecting life beyond Earth:

1. Launching robotic spacecraft to discover life on Mars or other worlds in our solar system.
2. Deploying large telescopes to detect the chemical signatures of life in the atmospheres of planets orbiting other stars.
3. Using various techniques to pick up signals from advanced civilizations or to find evidence of their technological activities.

Robert's talk will be loosely based on a cover story he wrote for the September 2020 issue of Astronomy magazine. His talk will be nontechnical and intended for a general audience.

Armed with only a camera, a sense of humor and a host of frequent flyer miles, Mathew Duman embarked on a "grotesque safari", traveling to 10 universities around the country to photograph the unique grotesques and gargoyles roosting on their academic buildings. Mathew found that this sculpture makes its home within a style of architecture known as Collegiate Gothic which was popular in the 19th and early 20th centuries. He has collected his findings in his book called: "The Grotesque 10: Amazing Architectural Sculpture from Ten American Colleges and Universities" and presents a selection in this illustrated lecture, giving you a taste of the variety of ornament, history and humor these campuses have to offer.

The grotesque 10 schools are:

Duke University • Northwestern University • Princeton University • The University of Chicago

CRUISE INTO KINDERGARTEN

The Hershey Public Library continues our commitment to quality preschool programming during the current pandemic. Our programs are designed to help children "cruise into kindergarten."

Pennsylvania Libraries and the Hershey Public Library know that children's development in the years between birth and Kindergarten is impacted greatly by loving relationships, stimulating environments, and engaging experiences. The Hershey Public Library encourages families to build stronger relationships by acknowledging and supporting families as a child's first teacher.
