WINTER 2022 • VOLUME 29 • ISSUE 1

CHAIRMAN'S CORNER

We finished 2021 in strong fashion by passing a second consecutive budget without a tax increase. This was no small feat due to the economic pressures created by the pandemic. The 2022 budget maintains and improves township services while reducing spending levels to less than what was spent in 2020. Our taxpayers can count on us to keep their interests at the forefront of everything we do. In 2022, newly elected Michael Corado will join the board. Michael has served on numerous township boards over the years and is well suited to step in and contribute. We are excited for Michael and look forward to working together to serve our community.

In 2022, we will continue to focus on improving the quality and effectiveness of township services. A new feature being rolled out on the township website in January of 2022 is the “suggestion/complaint” link that allows residents to submit feedback directly to our department directors for consideration or action. The Township manager will be better able to track complaints to our department directors and use that information to ensure that problems are addressed properly and timely. As we often say during our meetings, township residents are the eyes and ears of the board. Working together, we can keep Derry Township a great place to live, work and play.

We were also pleased to negotiate labor contracts with our police association and AFSCME employees that are sustainable into the future. Both contracts are for a period of three years and represent reasonable wage increases and employment conditions. We are proud to have such talented men and women working for the township. We appreciate the police association and AFSCME negotiating teams for their professionalism and respect. Together, we succeeded in arriving at labor contracts that serve the interests of all parties.

Without question, the biggest event of 2022 will be the opening of the new Derry Township Community Center. We expect the community center to open its doors in time for Memorial Day weekend, assuming no unforeseen supply chain or construction issues. The Parks and Recreation team has done a tremendous job keeping this project on-time and on-budget. The community center will offer a fitness center, a full slate of programs for all ages, two indoor pools, a gymnasium for basketball, volleyball, and pickleball, meeting rooms, a full kitchen facility to accommodate rentals, locker rooms, dedicated space for seniors who belong to the Mohler Center and comfortable seating areas. The indoor leisure pool and outdoor pool include popular features like water slides and zero-entry access. The competitive pool will feature ten 25-meter lanes for lap swimmers and competitions, and seating for spectators. We are excited about the results of our pre-opening membership sales. We created numerous membership packages to address the needs/desires of as many residents as possible. Special thanks to all those resident and businesses who contributed to the capital campaign. We received approximately $2.8 million in pledges so far.

We are confident that the Derry Township Community Center will serve our community well and be, yet another reason Derry Township is such a desirable place to live.

If you haven't visited the library since the renovations were completed last year, due to Covid or for any other reason, I encourage you to visit. The renovations modernized the interior and exterior appearances of the library and created some additional reading and activity rooms (as well as numerous quiet and peaceful spaces). Under the leadership of former library director Laura O'Grady, and with support from the Friends of the Hershey Library and the Library Endowment Trust, our library continues to be a state-of-the-art facility capable of serving the library needs of all residents. We hope to create some other ways to bring library services out to the community in 2022. Stay tuned for that news.

In 2021, we said goodbye to longtime Parks and Recreation Director, Matt Mandia, who retired after 27 years at the helm of the department. Matt was respected and loved by many and is certainly missed. If you have seen Matt around the community center building since his retirement, it is because he agreed to help finish the project in a consulting role.

We also welcomed two new department directors in 2021—Zachary Jackson at Park and Recreation and Alison Trautman at the Hershey Library. We are excited to have them and while they have big shoes to fill, they are equally up to the task.

In 2022, we are examining the possibility of opening a dog park. Much work must still be done on this project, and no location has yet been selected, but we would like to give this idea a try. We are also working on a home for our war memorials. We expect that the memorials will be located closer to the center of town and be a suitable location for our community to show our respect for the hometown heroes who made the ultimate sacrifice.

Looking forward to a healthy, positive, and productive 2022!

MILTON HERSHEY'S LESSER-KNOWN EARLY VENTURES: TRAVELING THE COUNTRY

Many know that prior to introducing his wildly popular Hershey's Milk Chocolate, Milton Hershey found his first success in caramels with the Lancaster Caramel Company. However, Lancaster Caramel was far from the first stop in Mr. Hershey's professional ventures – even in the candy industry. This is the third in a series of articles focusing on the lesser-known early ventures of Milton S. Hershey and how they shaped and influenced his later success.

You may recall that we last left Milton Hershey in Philadelphia in 1882, as his first business venture ended in bankruptcy. It was time to decide what to do -- and where to go -- next. Milton had been corresponding with his father, Henry Hershey (whose idea for a candy cabinet, you will remember, marked the end of his son's first business). Henry was out west, trying to make the most of the silver boom in Denver, Colorado, and wrote encouragingly about opportunities there. So, at about 25 years old, Milton decided that Denver would be his next adventure.

Denver, Colorado, ca. 1908. Courtesy of Library of Congress.

Milton arrived in Denver in 1882 and was greeted by his father. He set out looking for opportunities to work in the confectionery industry but found that it was difficult to find work in any industry. In fact, Denver had just entered a three-year depression. The silver boom that Henry had raved about in his letters had gone bust.

Paul A.W. Wallace, Milton Hershey biographer, wrote about Milton's search for work in his 1956 manuscript, Milton S. Hershey:

When looking about in Denver for a job one day, Mr. Hershey came to a place which had a sign, "BOY WANTED," in the window. When he rapped at the door, he heard a gruff, "Come in." He opened the door and walked in. Inside, there was an old man lying on a couch. He didn't get up. Mr. Hershey told him he was looking for work.

Milton Hershey, 1887. This is one of only a few known photographs of Mr. Hershey as a young man.

“All right,” said the old man. “You can go in that back room with the other boys.”

Hershey walked back and saw several young fellows, whose appearance he did not like. [...] So M. S. started to walk out, and found the door locked.

Mr. Hershey, as he told this story, said, “In those days we carried a gun.” He pulled out the gun and said, “You let me out the door.” The old man pulled a string or something that unlocked it, and Hershey went out.

This close encounter is illustrative of the “rough and tumble” nature of the city at that time. As Wallace wrote, “Denver awakened [Milton Hershey] to the wonder, glory, ugliness, and danger of the world, and at the same time gave him pride in his ability to cope with it.”

Finally, Milton found work with a confectioner, his chosen trade. We now believe this confectioner was a prominent Denver candymaker named Otto P. Baur; however, more research is required to confirm this theory. It was with this confectioner that he learned a key candy making technique that would come into play later in his career.

Prominent Denver confectioner Otto P. Baur, ca. 1886-1901. It is possible that Milton Hershey worked for Baur during his time in Denver. Courtesy of Denver Public Library, call no. H-9.

The candymaker used fresh milk in their caramels, rather than the then-customary paraffin. Using fresh milk gave the caramels a better mouthfeel and, perhaps even more importantly, a much longer shelf life.

This technique was pivotal to Mr. Hershey’s later success. At the Lancaster Caramel Company, he used this method to make his wildly popular caramels. Then, when developing his formula for Hershey’s Milk Chocolate bars, he again insisted on using fresh milk, even though it posed many challenges. Today, using fresh milk (rather than powdered) still sets Hershey’s chocolate apart from other manufacturers.

After only a few months in Denver, Milton decided to move on, as there was little opportunity to start his own business. He did not see this part of his life as a failure; but rather as a part of his education in the confectionery trade.

Next, he moved on to Chicago, where it’s possible he collaborated again with Henry. However, we have little information about that period. Then, he decided to travel to New Orleans to see what opportunities he could find. Again, we know little about this time; but we do know that, when inquiring about candy making equipment for a possible business, he found that he would need to have it shipped from New York City. Why pay the shipping fees from New York to New Orleans, he thought, when he could just go right to the source?

So, in 1883, Milton Hershey made his way to New York, New York to start his next business venture. Stay tuned for our next article about Mr. Hershey’s time in the Big Apple!
